AURORA – As John Lennon said, “I get by with a little help from my friends.” That’s never been more true for Heidi Soudani, who found a true friend in Victoria Albright.

After Heidi's daughter Farrah was critically injured during the midnight massacre in Aurora on July 20th, her long-time friend Victoria Albright immediately went to the hospital. Doctors said that Farrah had a long road of recovery ahead. Victoria asked Heidi if she could start a fundraising site for her daughter. Heidi said ‘yes,’ and Victoria began to raise money through www.gofundme.com/help-farah.

To date, more than 6,000 donors, from all over the world, have given more than $150,000 and the amount is still growing! Victoria is now turning over 100-percent of the money raised to ‘The Farrah Soudani Irrevocable Special Needs Trust’, of which Farrah is the sole beneficiary.

“I’m so amazed and inspired by the people who gave money to help Farrah after she was critically injured, even though they don’t personally know her or her mom,” Albright said. “If they did know them, they’d learn that Heidi and Farrah are incredible people who are so appreciative, and are grateful to each and every person who donated money and sent prayers and well wishes for Farrah’s recovery.”

Victoria sought help to set up the complicated Special Needs Trust (SNT) to protect funds exclusively for Farrah, while not disqualifying her from other available assistance programs. A generous donor retained Attorney Michael A. Smeenck of Boulder's Frasca, Joiner, Goodman & Greenstein, P.C. to create the Trust.

Following the press conference, the registered SNT document will be made available at www.gofundme.com/help-farah.
